The Problem:

In Illinois, landlords are able to refuse to rent to prospective tenants solely based on a record of arrest – even if the tenant has never been convicted of a crime. As a result, individuals and families can be denied the ability to find safe and affordable housing in their community.

Landlords can also deny housing to individuals for records that should not be considered because the court has ordered them to be expunged, sealed, or impounded from public view or they are protected under the Juvenile Court Act.

The Solution: Housing as a Human Right

SB1780 (HFA3) creates a civil rights violation under the Illinois Human Rights Act to refuse to engage in real estate transactions, or otherwise make housing unavailable to any buyer or renter based on:

1. An arrest not leading to a finding of guilt;
2. A juvenile record; or
3. A criminal history record ordered expunged, sealed, or impounded.

This bill aligns the housing protections for “arrest records” with the employment provisions of the Illinois Human Rights Act.
